Dangerous Goods Training for Shippers and Freight Forwarders

Dangerous goods training enables personnel having responsibilities in the transport of dangerous goods to acquire competencies to prepare and offer dangerous goods for transport by air. Due to various considerations, organisations may either develop in-house dangerous goods training programmes for its staff or outsource such training to service providers.

In-house dangerous goods training programme

Shippers and freight forwarders intending to develop such training programmes should be familiar with the competency-based training and assessment (CBTA) requirements. Guidance can be found in CAAS' Advisory Circular on Competency-Based Dangerous Goods Training Programme available in the following QR code:

Outsourcing dangerous goods training to training service providers

Organisations having personnel that perform the following well-defined functions may also consider outsourcing dangerous goods training to training service providers:

IATA Reference* and Well-Defined Functions Performed by Shippers and Freight Forwarders	Recommended Duration of Training
7.1 - Personnel responsible for preparing dangerous goods consignments	Initial Training: 4 to 5 days Recurrent Training: 3 days
7.2 - Personnel responsible for processing or accepting goods presented as general cargo	Initial Training: 1 day Recurrent Training: 0.5 to 1 day
7.3 - Personnel responsible for processing or accepting dangerous goods consignments	Initial Training: 4 to 5 days Recurrent Training: 3 days
7.4 - Personnel responsible for handling in a warehouse, loading and unloading unit load devices (ULDs).	Initial Training: 1 day Recurrent Training: 0.5 to 1 day

* Reference to IATA Dangerous Goods Training Guidance – Competency-based Training and Assessment Approach. Service providers may quote these references when identifying knowledge training courses associated with these well-defined functions.

In Singapore, most dangerous goods training service providers are accredited by IATA under its CBTA Center accreditation programme. Under this programme, training service providers develop and offer generic knowledge training courses applicable to well-defined functions.

Factors to consider when deciding courses and training service providers

When selecting dangerous goods courses and training service providers, some factors that organisations should consider include:

Instructional method – influences the outcome of the training and should be considered with the complexity of the course contents and demographics of personnel.

Duration of course – reasonableness in the duration needed to cover the contents to a level of depth commensurate with the well-defined function;

Course instructors – should be familiar with the job function and sufficiently qualified and experienced; and

Cost – prudent to be cost conscious, but this should not be the sole criteria in the decision process.

On-The-Job training

Organisations should note that the courses offered by training service providers are generic in nature and are unlikely to cover any specific organisation's procedures or to verify personnel's competency to perform the function at the workplace. Consequently, organisations should arrange for newly hired staff to undergo on-the-job training and assessment programme which provides opportunities for new staff to apply their knowledge and demonstrate their skills under the guidance of a mentor. By ensuring that its personnel acquire competencies through suitable knowledge and skills training, organisations can contribute to the safe transport of dangerous goods by air.

WSH COUNCIL

Mandatory Top Executive WSH Programme for CEO or Board Directors of High-Risk Industries

Chief Executives or Board Directors of companies in high-risk industries, including transport and storage, are required to attend the Top Executive WSH Programme (TEWP) by March 2024. This is in line with the SAFE (Safety Accountability, Focus and Empowerment) measures announced by the Ministry of Manpower to strengthen WSH ownership at the company level.

The TEWP focuses corporate leaders' attention on how to meet their WSH responsibilities and develop their company's WSH capabilities. It covers:

- The importance of WSH for businesses;
- CEOs' and Board Members' legal responsibilities for WSH;
- The Approved Code of Practice for Chief Executives and Board of Directors' WSH Duties; and
- WSH policy preparation.

Companies with TEWP certification are eligible to apply for bizSAFE Level 1. The TEWP would eventually replace the existing bizSAFE Level 1 Workshop for CEOs/Top Management.

Both online and in-person training for the TEWP are available. To apply for TEWP, please contact NTUC Learning Hub or SCAL Academy. From January 2024, companies can also register for TEWP with Absolute Kinetics Consultancy. We encourage companies to sign up early to avoid a last-minute rush.

Scan the QR code for FAQs on the TEWP.

Code of Practice on Chief Executives' and Board of Directors' WSH Duties

Section 48(1) of the WSH Act holds all Company Directors liable in ensuring their workers' safety and health. Under the same section, they are also responsible for proving that they have exercised due diligence to prevent workplace incidents.

To help Company Directors comply with section 48(1) of the WSH Act, this Code of Practice has been developed to provide clarity on their WSH responsibilities and help enhance their WSH ownership. It also lists available resources that can aid Company Directors in their efforts to discharge their duties and uphold WSH standards at their workplaces. For more in-depth induction, Company Directors that require more in-depth induction on their WSH responsibilities may attend the TEWP.

SINGAPORE FOOD AGENCY

Fish&Meatz LLP and its company representative fined $10,000 each for illegally operating an unlicensed cold store

Fish&Meatz LLP, an online grocer, has been fined $10,000 by the Court on 27 December for illegally operating an unlicensed cold store. In addition to this, Chung Seng Choy, the representative of Fish&Meatz LLP, was also fined $10,000 for failing to prevent the offenses from taking place. On 1 February 2023, officers from the Singapore Food Agency (SFA) discovered an unlicensed cold store at Fish&Meatz LLP's premises that was storing various meat and seafood products. SFA seized approximately 2965kg of meat and seafood products as a result.

Keeping meat and seafood in unlicensed facilities is a food safety hazard. All facilities that store raw meat and seafood must be licensed and meet the requirements and food safety standards set by SFA. SFA regularly inspects these licensed premises to ensure compliance with the regulations. Anyone found to be in possession of meat or seafood products stored in unlicensed cold stores for the purpose of selling or supplying them can face a maximum fine of $50,000 and/or imprisonment for up to 2 years upon conviction. In the case of a second or subsequent conviction, the fine can be up to $100,000 and/or imprisonment for up to 3 years.
